Ex-NSA Director, US Intelligence Veterans Write Open Letter To Merkel To Avoid All-Out Ukraine War

Alarmed at the anti-Russian hysteria sweeping Washington, and the specter of a new Cold War, U.S. intelligence veterans one of whom is none other than William Binney, the former senior NSA crypto-mathematician who back in March 2012 blew the whistle on the NSA's spying programs more than a year before Edward Snowden, took the unusual step of sending the following memo dated August 30 to German Chancellor Merkel challenging the reliability of Ukrainian and U.S. media claims about a Russian "invasion."

Via AntiWar and ConsortiumNews, highlights ours

MEMORANDUM FOR: Angela Merkel, Chancellor of Germany
FROM: Veteran Intelligence Professionals for Sanity (VIPS)
SUBJECT: Ukraine and NATO

We the undersigned are longtime veterans of U.S. intelligence. We take the unusual step of writing this open letter to you to ensure that you have an opportunity to be briefed on our views prior to the NATO summit on September 4-5.

You need to know, for example, that accusations of a major Russian "invasion" of Ukraine appear not to be supported by reliable intelligence. Rather, the "intelligence" seems to be of the same dubious, politically "fixed" kind used 12 years ago to "justify" the U.S.-led attack on Iraq. We saw no credible evidence of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq then; we see no credible evidence of a Russian invasion now. Twelve years ago, former Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder, mindful of the flimsiness of the evidence on Iraqi WMD, refused to join in the attack on Iraq. In our view, you should be appropriately suspicious of charges made by the US State Department and NATO officials alleging a Russian invasion of Ukraine.

President Barack Obama tried yesterday to cool the rhetoric of his own senior diplomats and the corporate media, when he publicly described recent activity in the Ukraine, as "a continuation of what's been taking place for months now ... it's not really a shift."

Obama, however, has only tenuous control over the policymakers in his administration - who, sadly, lack much sense of history, know little of war, and substitute anti-Russian invective for a policy. One year ago, hawkish State Department officials and their friends in the media very nearly got Mr. Obama to launch a major attack on Syria based, once again, on "intelligence" that was dubious, at best.

Largely because of the growing prominence of, and apparent reliance on, intelligence we believe to be spurious, we think the possibility of hostilities escalating beyond the borders of Ukraine has increased significantly over the past several days. More important, we believe that this likelihood can be avoided, depending on the degree of judicious skepticism you and other European leaders bring to the NATO summit next week.

Experience With Untruth

Hopefully, your advisers have reminded you of NATO Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen's checkered record for credibility. It appears to us that Rasmussen's speeches continue to be drafted by Washington. This was abundantly clear on the day before the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq when, as Danish Prime Minister, he told his Parliament: "Iraq has weapons of mass destruction. This is not something we just believe. We know."

Photos can be worth a thousand words; they can also deceive. We have considerable experience collecting, analyzing, and reporting on all kinds of satellite and other imagery, as well as other kinds of intelligence. Suffice it to say that the images released by NATO on August 28 provide a very flimsy basis on which to charge Russia with invading Ukraine. Sadly, they bear a strong resemblance to the images shown by Colin Powell at the UN on February 5, 2003 that, likewise, proved nothing.

That same day, we warned President Bush that our former colleague analysts were "increasingly distressed at the politicization of intelligence" and told him flatly, "Powell's presentation does not come close" to justifying war. We urged Mr. Bush to "widen the discussion ... beyond the circle of those advisers clearly bent on a war for which we see no compelling reason and from which we believe the unintended consequences are likely to be catastrophic."

Consider Iraq today. Worse than catastrophic. Although President Vladimir Putin has until now showed considerable reserve on the conflict in the Ukraine, it behooves us to remember that Russia, too, can "shock and awe." In our view, if there is the slightest chance of that kind of thing eventually happening to Europe because of Ukraine, sober-minded leaders need to think this through very carefully.

If the photos that NATO and the US have released represent the best available "proof" of an invasion from Russia, our suspicions increase that a major effort is under way to fortify arguments for the NATO summit to approve actions that Russia is sure to regard as provocative. Caveat emptor is an expression with which you are no doubt familiar. Suffice it to add that one should be very cautious regarding what Mr. Rasmussen, or even Secretary of State John Kerry, are peddling.

We trust that your advisers have kept you informed regarding the crisis in Ukraine from the beginning of 2014, and how the possibility that Ukraine would become a member of NATO is anathema to the Kremlin. According to a February 1, 2008 cable (published by WikiLeaks) from the US embassy in Moscow to Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, US Ambassador William Burns was called in by Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov, who explained Russia's strong opposition to NATO membership for Ukraine.

Lavrov warned pointedly of "fears that the issue could potentially split the country in two, leading to violence or even, some claim, civil war, which would force Russia to decide whether to intervene." Burns gave his cable the unusual title, "NYET MEANS NYET: RUSSIA'S NATO ENLARGEMENT REDLINES," and sent it off to Washington with IMMEDIATE precedence. Two months later, at their summit in Bucharest NATO leaders issued a formal declaration that "Georgia and Ukraine will be in NATO."

Just yesterday, Ukrainian Prime Minister Arseny Yatsenyuk used his Facebook page to claim that, with the approval of Parliament that he has requested, the path to NATO membership is open. Yatsenyuk, of course, was Washington's favorite pick to become prime minister after the February 22 coup d'etat in Kiev. "Yats is the guy," said Assistant Secretary of State Victoria Nuland a few weeks before the coup, in an intercepted telephone conversation with US Ambassador to Ukraine Geoffrey Pyatt. You may recall that this is the same conversation in which Nuland said, "Fuck the EU."

Timing of the Russian "Invasion"

The conventional wisdom promoted by Kiev just a few weeks ago was that Ukrainian forces had the upper hand in fighting the anti-coup federalists in southeastern Ukraine, in what was largely portrayed as a mop-up operation. But that picture of the offensive originated almost solely from official government sources in Kiev. There were very few reports coming from the ground in southeastern Ukraine. There was one, however, quoting Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko, that raised doubt about the reliability of the government's portrayal.

According to the "press service of the President of Ukraine" on August 18, Poroshenko called for a "regrouping of Ukrainian military units involved in the operation of power in the East of the country. ... Today we need to do the rearrangement of forces that will defend our territory and continued army offensives," said Poroshenko, adding, "we need to consider a new military operation in the new circumstances."

If the "new circumstances" meant successful advances by Ukrainian government forces, why would it be necessary to "regroup," to "rearrange" the forces? At about this time, sources on the ground began to report a string of successful attacks by the anti-coup federalists against government forces. According to these sources, it was the government army that was starting to take heavy casualties and lose ground, largely because of ineptitude and poor leadership.

Ten days later, as they became encircled and/or retreated, a ready-made excuse for this was to be found in the "Russian invasion." That is precisely when the fuzzy photos were released by NATO and reporters like the New York Times' Michael Gordon were set loose to spread the word that "the Russians are coming." (Michael Gordon was one of the most egregious propagandists promoting the war on Iraq.)

No Invasion - But Plenty Other Russian Support

The anti-coup federalists in southeastern Ukraine enjoy considerable local support, partly as a result of government artillery strikes on major population centers. And we believe that Russian support probably has been pouring across the border and includes, significantly, excellent battlefield intelligence. But it is far from clear that this support includes tanks and artillery at this point - mostly because the federalists have been better led and surprisingly successful in pinning down government forces.

At the same time, we have little doubt that, if and when the federalists need them, the Russian tanks will come.

This is precisely why the situation demands a concerted effort for a ceasefire, which you know Kiev has so far been delaying. What is to be done at this point? In our view, Poroshenko and Yatsenyuk need to be told flat-out that membership in NATO is not in the cards - and that NATO has no intention of waging a proxy war with Russia - and especially not in support of the ragtag army of Ukraine. Other members of NATO need to be told the same thing.

 How un-patriotic of them! Sadly, you don't have to be an ex- or current NSA employee to see it. All it takes is a reasonable person to pay attention (I know, this is the problem) to the web of disinfo and it is obviously a shit show. As far as I can tell, here is where we are:

The Western political regime has been failing for a long time, and has maintained a constant "crisis-mode" in order to keep the facade up and the dissent down.

The financial fraud has long since engulfed the entire economic system of the west, to where now virtually every market is dominated by these fraudsters.

To placate the inattentive masses, the narratives (political, social and economic) must become more and more bizzare in order to maintain the look of "sanity."

The corporate press are so desperate to maintain the failed narratives and faux polarities that little or no truth is revealed by the former 4th estate.

Because of the ongoing narrative, people die every day - through murder, hardship and suicide - so that a few can benefit from this failed society.

The most powerful and technologically advanced military in the world is still serving this failed regime.

If you try to find reason or good social conscience in any of it, it will do nothing but make you mentally ill, because all it is there to do is to hide the truth and to cover the tracks of traitor elites that will destroy everyone rather than relinquish power. All of these tools and centralized powers will soon be turned upon Americans in true and all-out snake-eats-tail fashion.

Since I have let go of the otherwise meaningless narratives peddled on MSM and by gov talking heads, I really do see where much of it all fits together. What I'm saying is, there is much less cognitive dissonance when you realize that your society actually is caving in on itself. The best thing I can suggest if and when you come to these conclusions is to set long-term constructive goals that assume the above is true. Don't panic. Make goals. Here are some I came up with:

- become as self-reliant as possible, and as little reliant upon the gov as possible.
- without evangelizing it, always be prepared to help your loved ones understand it.
- have an emergency action plan (or plans) to cover a variety of contingencies.
- teach yourself as many skills and trades that would be important in a post-financial collapse world.
- network with your neighbors (face-to-face, not on FB, ffs).
- stay in shape.
- don't wallow in the sadness of a society that is destroying itself, or you will reflect it in one way or another (substance abuse, depression, etc).

Occident Mortal

Foreign policy in Washington has been a complete shambles for a decade now. Perhaps longer but the last 10 years have been just atrocious.

There is no strategy, no long term goal and no planning. It is clear as day to everyone. What doctrine are they following? PIVOTING towards 8,000 miles of open water?

You don't have to be Vladimir Putin to spot that US foreign policy has collapsed into some kind of strategic infancy.

Trying to spark a war with the Kremlin on Asian soil is nothing short of absolute suicide. Not even the entire world combined could defeat Russia in war. Just like the entire world combined could not defeat the US or China, or India you cannot defeat an indigenous population on their home turf, it's impossible to hold the ground. All that can be achieved with war is to assassinate a regime. Unless you follow Adolf Hitler down the road of genocide it is impossible to defeat any population of 100 million people.

The USA failed to convincingly defeat the Viet Cong and failed to bring change to Iraq. What do they think will happen when that go toe to toe with Russian military prowess and all the strategic and tactical sophistication that the Russians repeatedly show. Fire and Brimstone would rain down on North America from the Arctic Circle.

A hot war with Russia would yield nothing. Even if the West assassinated Putin, it is likely that an even more radical anti-West hardman would take his place.

If you're going to start a war, don't go after a strategically astute country who command a third of the worlds resources. With slavery abolished, what can war actually achieve? In this day and age you cannot subjugate the defeated population. There are no spoils, only blowback.

 But probably only where they think it counts. I wouldn't be surprised if we stuck to all of the various START treaties, because we could still annihilate the world while adhearing to them. OTOH, Russia has made many of its newer ICBMs and SLBMs such that they could be made to violate those treaties in a hurry while not actually deploying them in a way that violates them, or so we're told. They've built them with the potential to MIRV the fuck out of them, while not actually deploying them with more warheads than the treaties allow. 09/02/2014 - 01:38 | 5170167
 Speaking of, since ZH is doing a lot of geopolitics these days, it might be worth it for the Tylers to compile all that exists in the public domain on Russia's current nuclear arsenal. Such a compilation wouldn't be 100% accurate, but as with all things involving nuclear warheads, close is good enough.

You truly are a moron.

"Technical Director, World Geopolitical & Military Analysis, NSA" is not the director of the NSA, who have always been 3 star general and flag officers of the US military.

William Binney was essentially the guy who developed and administered computer networks for a directorate in the NSA. He was never Senior Executive Service. I think the highest paygrade he achieved was GS-14, which is small potatoes in DC. He never ran any directorate, division or branch within NSA. He has not been in the loop at NSA for 13 years, and really has no clue what he is talking about at this point. No one disconnected from an organization for 13 years, especially one as compartmentalized and secretive as the NSA, possible could.

Again, the headline of the article is blatantly factually incorrect, and so the rest of the article's contents should be treated with great suspicion.

I am not a friend of the NSA. I think their spying on US citizens without warrant is unconstitutional and people there need to be fired and/or sent to jail, starting with Clapper who lied to congress. But facts are facts, and you do your cause no service by just making shit up.

Oh, BTW, his last job at NSA was as "Technical Lead," which looks to me like a demotion. My take is he is disgruntled.

Perhaps it is because he did not like what he saw there and tried to stop it, but he resigned one month after 9/11, before the NSA started all this domestic spying crap. In the end, it may not really matter what his motives are, but you do have to take everything he claims with a grain of salt and try to verify all. His self-puffery does not lend him credence, however. Having said that, trust no one, and do not swallow anyone's tripe just because of a personal inclination or bias, and facts really are facts. Let's get this straight. No article precedes "director" in the headline. If the article "the" preceded "director" it would be false, but it doesn't so it's not.

My ex-employer had dozens of Chiefs of several different levels, including one in particular who was "COD," "CD1," or "Chief of Department." It's false to claim the dozens of Chiefs not COD are not each a Chief.

Exactly how is a Technical Director not a Director?

I agree it's more accurate if the Title included the modifier "Technical" in front of Director but it's not false to omit the word.

I presume he answered directly to The Director or only one person removed.

Where to start a director of any group at a 3 letter agency should be at least a grade 15 or more likely SES on the pay scale. Unless I am mistaken there are no SES pay grade employees who aren't in management as directors of some sort.

Here is a chart of equivalent military rank and pay scales along with the equivalent pay scale and rank for a civilian.
<http://www.history.navy.mil/library/online/comparison.htm>

Your civilian pay grade determines your rank when dealing working with the military within the DOD. An E6 for example would have to treat a GS11 for example as lieutenant as far as rank and command goes.

There are a lot of layers of directors in agencies like the NSA.

You may have one director who is the head of all SIGINT for example then directors (lower SES pay scales) of individual groups under SIGINT. Then you have upper management directors above the head of all SIGINT. The organizational structure is the organizational structure regardless. It has to be uniform and modular to be able to integrate all these sub 3 letter agencies under any one department to function in an orderly fashion.

Binney at a minimum would have been either an equivalent Captain or Lower Rear Admiral/Brigadier General(other services equivalent) in rank.

That rank is a 1 star general....

The EU and USSA want war. They know their economies are tanking with no hope of reviving them (yes, QE is a total disaster and they know it), and a war would be a very convenient scapegoat to blame it all on. In the public's eye, the politicians would come out smelling like a rose, and of course they would never do any of the actual fighting themselves.

The only potential monkey wrench would be if it turned into a nuclear war. They will hide in their fallout shelters and survive, but the masses that they need to support and make them rich will be gone.

The US and the EU want what they thought they had, and still might get. They want low-level guerrilla war through proxies. They don't want open, full-on war. They want this to take as long for Russia as Afghanistan is taking for us, and for that matter, as it did for the Russians 30 years ago. That way maximum damage can be done to potential rivals Russia and the EU.

The EU hasn't yet figured out that the US is their enemy too,

Well, I certainly hope that is the case. I've had a theory that I've kept to myself mainly because I have absolutely no proof and it sounds pretty wacked out even to this nutjob. It goes something along these lines. The PTB have delayed the collapse long enough (using 911, etc..) so that they could develop/refine (whatever) the means for producing (3d printers, robotics, ect) servants and ways to continue on in their opulance without the inconvenience of people who could usurp them. It's very conspiratorial and Dr Evil ish (even for me) but given all the leaks about DUMBs (deep underground military bases), technology suppressed (free energy or VERY efficient engines), ETC., is it possible that these bastards are THAT fucked up? I recently thought of the following: we're in a brief deficit lull for the next 3-5 years, running only about $.5T annual. After that all bets off, entitlements start steep upward deficit spiral with unknown untested ceiling. If interest rates are forced upward, we're toast.

If they wait till later to start a big war, the deficit won't really allow for it. They'd have to tell people to starve to feed the war effort, and that won't go over well. If they start the war now, later when "entitlements" rear their ugly head, TPTB can force draconian cuts, which will be easier to force because the populace will be terrified because of the ongoing war.

They have a short window to start the fireworks, and fireworks they intend to burn.

There were huge import taxes on manufactured goods. I remember seeing Tupperware in a shop window downtown Casablanca displayed like luxury goods – with prices to match. I had a plastic "pilots suitcase" I bought at Sears for $10 that shopowners were constantly trying to buy from me. The first time I was in a shop just after arriving in Tangiers, a leather goods shop, and one of the guys hanging around felt the Sears special and mutter the word "plastique".  All these skirmishes that NATO gets involved in, fighting totally OUT OF THE THEATRE it was 'publically' conceived for (North Atlantic), are groundlines for a global military, IMO. See it through this prism, and soon Keyser, they will. Systems integration, port familiarisation, command threading etc. Q is: will it become global directly as the NeoMerc Corporate Defence Force, or are we going to have to go through the Oceania/Eurasia/Eastasia theatre before that. Or is it being set up for the Earth based shooting war with 1/ETs or 2/Remnant ex-citizens.

 The Australian public is being duped on a massive scale by their media. To me, in Melbourne, it looks as though they would love to have a repeat of Gallipol - when thousands of Australian soldiers were massacred because of British ineptitude.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gallipoli\_Campaign
 My father and his brothers, in Cairo during WW2, witnessed Australian soldiers beating up British officers and soldiers. They more or less took over Cairo because of their frustration with British incompetence. You won't find much about it in the history books, but it did happen.
 Some things never change.

Yeah, but the Canadians don't matter as over 20%
of them are foreign born (most of those being Chinese & Indians). And, since it's the Conservatives who are beating the drums of war, you can safely subtract all native Quebequers from the rest. All in all, at least one third of the Canadian population doesn't pay ANY attention to the noises coming from Ottawa. Besides, it looks quite probable that the Conservatives (currently in power for about 10 years now) will lose the federal elections scheduled next year. Nothing serious to be seen there... lots of drama, but very little substance.

Not surprising, considering that Australia is another captive US colony. The new US marine base there, ostensibly serving as a "buffer" against Chinese aggression, is really only there to serve as a reminder to Australian politicians that they had better stay in line.
Otherwise, there may be consequences.

I think it is London

Remember the scene in JFK where Jim Garrison meets with the

JFK assassination in the news papers in NZ or AU before it happens. Some people may not like Oliver Stone but he is pretty much against these whole evil MIC govt too. He did his homework on JFK but left a few things out.

except for glaring omission in homage to Zionists who own Stone and all/most of Hollywood. Stone left out that JFK told Israel they may not go nuclear, knowing it would set off a horrible arms race in the ME.

Six months after Johnson took office, Israel was a happy nuclear armed nation.

Coincidence, not.

Of course, JFK also intended to dismantle the 4th Estate (CIA) because he saw they were completely out of control.

Let's see JFK's enemies list:

Israel's Mossad: check

CIA: check

The Mob, headed by Judaic Meyer Lanskey: check (see the first one, Israel)

In the Mob's defense, JFK seems to be partly to blame. Was he the only one in the world who didn't know Joe purchased IL in the vote? About 90% of IL Teamsters are non-Catholics with strong distrust for Catholics. Joe tells his mob buddies to order the Teamsters in IL to vote for JFK. JFK wins IL and the election.

Then six months later Bobby tosses most of the Mob leaders in prison. What's up with that?

Stone left out the punchline and had enough in there to know what was really going on. JFK also was going after the Fed. Remember the JFK silver dollars and I think he had silver dies and other coins.

More recently - Stone's son who has worked with Jesse Ventura's show converts to Islam.

The Kennedys made lots of enemies and the worst mistake was taking zio-LBJ in their tent. Meyer Lansky made his early money importing heroin into the USA via Mexico.

The proposed and highly stupid 'forward' NATO force will be European and largely British. So if anyone is going to get their arse handed to them it will be them.

By the way if you read in more detail over 20,000 British soldiers were also 'massacred' during the same Gallipoli campaign. This included unknown thousands of Turks and over 10,000 French. When the Murdoch, sorry, Australian media reinforces the mythology of nation through Gallipoli it's as if no one else except Australians were there. Even the enemy does not get a mention.

 It's simply false to state that this Administration has no military experience. The irony that these are a bunch of Vietnam vets should be lost on no one. Apparently it was lost in these authors however. I could understand if these "back benchers" were to claim a lack of knowledge of the Middle East...but everyone of these folks save the President is a veteran of the Cold War and it's aftermath. They didn't just live that history...all of them were Instrumental in creating it.

 Lot of moving parts here with the hardest reaction indeed saying "nyet" to all this. Without explicitly stating the "nyet" option and saying "we have no plan" only inflames the situation.
 There is a point of "no rhetoric return"...where the words used to justify an exit strategy instead make us look weak and cause the real thing to break out. Seems to me "we're there" actually.
 Even in nature animals assume a threatening pose...only humans just start attacking then add on ye olde "there's more where that came from phucker" rejoinder.
 The Art of Diplomacy revolves around creation a dialogue that precludes said rejoinder. I don't even know why I bother talking about...everyone I might just wants war, deprivation and death...OF EVERYBODY.
 I mean "let's gin up voting blocs" as a solution? This sounds like the recipe for a total catastrophe to me.

 There won't be any war. They don't have people ready to fight such a war, especially with a country like Russia. Even the dumbed down Europeans still remember that Russia was the graveyard for 2 European empires. Then it's the Americans who lost over 4000 people fighting some towel heads in the easiest terrain possible. Imagine going to offensive in North Dakota sometime in January, and having to march all the way to the Hudson Bay (for some sort of victory). That can give you an approximate idea about what a Russian war would start to feel like. Or, better yet, ask a German veteran of WWII (preferably one that made it out of Stalingrad...)

 The seperatists have basically turned those two cities into hellholes. The locals don't even want them there anymore (pillaging, theft, and general breakdown of law and order).
 You can read what a Russian journalist himself says about it:
<http://www.znak.com/moscow/articles/25-08-19-49/102823>
 PS: they were so suspicious... they arrested him!

btw, its hard for me to believe that people do not believe that Russian units are operating in Ukraine, when Ukraine just sent some captured paratroopers back. Back when Putin was denying everything about green men, i had a friend in Sevastopol (father in Russian Navy) who was in a place to know... tell me point blank that they were Russian troops. Meanwhile the news organizations here in the West seemed clueless. Of course Putin was lying through his teeth.

Going by half the comments here, most folks on here seem just about as conspiratorial in belief as the Russian folks that hang out on the Anti-Maydan discussion groups. No matter what kind of problem there is... the root cause (in their minds) always backtracks to something that the USA has done to them and a conspiracy will be invented to make it so.

Drones, bots, DEW, HAARP etc. I dont think there were that many 'allied' people on the ground during Dresden, and the 'Dunkirk' extravaganza will never be needed again IMO. Hitler's 'secret weapons' were highly advanced toward the end of his reign. Doodlebugs were falling on London and V2 was good to go, the almost Messerschitt jet would have carved up Spitfires and Mustangs, and heavy water for their nuclear programme was made. Other deep tech (for the era) was taken to the US under Operation Paperclip, and included the tech and technicians who got NASA off the ground. Literally.
